INSURANCE REFORMS

Demand For Congress to Act In This Matter.

TWO MEASURES ARE PENDING.

President's Message Brings Child Labor Question to the Front—Senator Beveridge and Lodge Have Each a Remedy For The Evil.

By CHARLES W. ARTHUR.
Washington, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—If no insurance legislation is enacted by the present session of congress it will be because the lawmakers are not willing to accede to the wishes of a very large number of people in all parts of the United States.

Reform in both fire and life insurance are being demanded by policy holders everywhere, and it is difficult to see how congress can avoid meeting the issue which has been raised. True, the supreme court has declared that insurance is not commerce, and therefore not directly under the jurisdiction of the national legislature, but there are other ways of getting around the matter and enacting a law which in the opinion of experts, will go a long way toward bringing about the desired improvements in existing conditions.

Two Insurance Bills.
Two bills bearing on the subject are now before congress. One of them, introduced by Representative Butler, of Massachusetts, provides for what amounts to regulation of all fire and life insurance companies through the laws of the District of Columbia. Mr. Ames' bill, which was discussed at length by the house judiciary committee last session, is to pass a model insurance law for the District and for the territories of the United States. Congress has the power to do this, of course. All insurance companies would naturally desire to operate in the District and in the territories. If they did not conform strictly to the law in effect in those places they would be blacklisted, and their business elsewhere would naturally suffer to such an extent that they would be glad to reform in order to get back on the old basis.

This plan has been approved by a conference of insurance officials of several states. It is said to be wholly constitutional, and many members of congress believe it will prove to be the only logical solution of the problem which affects policy holders all over the country.

Regulation By Taxation.
The other plan referred to was originated by Representative Morrell of Pennsylvania. In brief it provides for the regulation of insurance companies of all kinds by a system of taxation. While it is acknowledged to possess good points, the preponderance of sentiment in congress seems to be on the side of the Ames bill, and it is thought that there is a bare chance of the latter getting through the legislative mill before the end of the present session. Imperious has been given the reform movement against the insurance companies by Representative Kahn of California, who has brought up the action of certain concerns which have failed to make good their losses in the San Francisco fire and moved to enclose from this country all such concerns which have their headquarters abroad.

Child Labor Problem.
The question of child labor is another that will receive considerable attention before the end of the session. The president's message shows that he is desirous of putting a stop to the employment of children in factories and mines, and as congress understands the subject better it appears that there is a more noticeable disposition to enact a law on the subject. Senators Beveridge of Indiana and Lodge of Massachusetts both have bills relating to the matter, and while some little pique has been manifested over the question of who deserves credit for originating the proposed legislation, it is probable that after awhile there will be a combining of forces which in the end will bring about the desired result.

Beveridge Plans.
Senator Beveridge and Senator Lodge both plan to reach the root of the child labor evil by prohibiting the transportation as interstate commerce of the products of all factories, mines, etc., which employ children under fourteen years of age. The two senators agree that no system of separate state laws would be effective unless each state enacted the same law, and that is unlikely. Congress cannot say what the factories in any given state can or cannot do, but it has the power to get at the desired result through the method outlined. Each establishment affected by the proposed act would be required to file semiannual affidavits to the effect that it has no children under the prescribed age in its employ and had not had during the preceding six months' period. Before accepting any of its freight for transportation the railways will be authorized to demand the production of these affidavits. No system of inspection is provided for in either of the bills, but the two authors thereof are of the opinion that public spirited citizens of every factory or mining town will be on the lookout for violations of the law and will promptly report them. The only argument made by opponents of the proposed statute is that the present system permits children of poor parents to assist in supporting their families, who might suffer were it not for such support. The conclusions of all investigators are to the contrary, however.

BLOCH TAILORING Co

THE OCEAN LINER.

Safety Devices That Are Operated From The Bridge.

It is in its safety devices and the provisions made to meet every possible accident that the modern liner is particularly remarkable. All the machinery which may be set in motion in case of danger is controlled on the bridge, and as perfectly as it has been arranged that the entire vessel could be controlled if the necessity should arise by means of a series of levers and push buttons. About the walls of the wheelhouse are arranged a number of levers and buttons which the engineer in command can use at a great height. About these are hung a surprising variety of barometer, thermometer, chronometer, wind and rain gauges and other less familiar looking instruments. There are rows upon rows of buttons and levers so every hand, all highly polished and in the most perfect working order. The danger of fire at sea, for instance, is anticipated by a device which connects with the frame of the ship. There are like the frame indicator. There are thermometers in every part of the ship electrically connected with this box which are constantly on guard. If a fire should start in any part of the great ship, the temperature would of course rise, and the fact would instantly be announced in the wheelhouse by the ringing of a bell, while a red light would flash at the same time, one of the squares of the indicator. The man at the wheel could tell at a glance the exact point of danger. —Francis Arnold, Collins in St. Nicholas.

POTATOES IN FRANCE.

Parliamentary Why France to Sell the Potatoes Against Them.

The way in which Parliament created a demand for potatoes in France would have done credit to the wit of any tradesman. Nothing would attract induce the simple minded peasants to cultivate the popular tuber. They would not listen to lectures on the virtues nor accept seed potatoes free of cost for planting.

Parliament therefore decided to get the better of their prejudice by offering them with this offer. Just before the opening of the crop he posted notices round the fields and issued notices that all persons stealing potatoes would be severely punished, the crop being intended for the tables of the king and nobles.

Such delicacies continued to be offered, were too good for ignorant peasants, who would touch them at their peril. Of course watch was kept during the day, and at night the fields were robbed sight and left by the peasants, who were curious to taste the strange vegetable and jealous that it should be reserved for their betters.

As soon as they had tasted the excellent tubers the peasants were only too anxious to plant as many as they could possibly purchase, the wily parliament's scheme thus succeeding beyond the most extravagant anticipations.

The Chinese Lily.

To make the Chinese lily in water remove the brown dried skin and all the hard callous at the base of the bulb. Do not separate the bulbs, but take a sharp knife and scoop the main bulb as though to quarter it but do not cut more than a quarter of an inch deep. Cut the offshoots also. This wastes the bulb, but develops the foliage growth. Arrange the bulbs in a glass bowl, standing them with pebbles, bits of marble and shells; also put in broken charcoal to keep the water sweet. The water may be changed once or twice before they bloom. Place in a dark cupboard or closet for ten days until the roots are well started.

A President's Pipe.

General Jackson was a poor eater, and well for him that he was, or he would have often gone hungry on the days when large crowds came to the White House for a free lunch. It is related on one occasion the poor man was moved to thank the Almighty that after the crowd had gone there was a new piece of steak in the ice chest on which he could make a dinner. There seems to be absolutely no foundation for the stories of Jackson being a hard drinker, for his physical condition forbade all excesses. He liked his toddy in company with his corned pipe, but he was no lover of all kinds of intoxicants. —Home Magazine.

A King's Logic.

George IV. of England prided himself on lifting his hat to every one who saluted him in public, but once it was observed that he bowed to every one on the street. It came to a man, who swept a crossing, whom he passed without notice. He explained the matter afterward, when points of etiquette were under discussion, by saying, "To salute a beggar without giving him something would be a mockery, and to stop for the purpose of bestowing alms would wear the semblance of ostentation in a prince."

The View of Experience.

"What I want," said the constable, "is a nice, easy position."
"My friend," answered Senator Sorghum, "give up that idea. When an easy position is discovered so many people are after it that a man has to fight ten hours a day to hold on to it." —Washington Star.

"A GOOD LOOKER."

Appearance Have Much to Do With Success In Business.

"Send me a good looking man," said a lady, "you know, but one who looks like a success. The other man I had with me, the one who looks like a failure. Of course I know it costs, but we are willing to pay for it. This was a telephone message received by a large employment agency from a business man who required the services of a young woman bookkeeper and general office assistant."

A stylish woman or well-dressed man, well-dressed man may cost you very much, but it may be a saving point in some cases. A man who has been thinking of patronizing you. These men are hard to come by, very hard, and often influenced by little things. A man who is well-dressed has been sent away when applying for a situation because of some trifling fault in his dress or manner which made a bad impression. Young men may see the emphasis the matter of dress that their good appearance is almost all there is to them. At the same time, a man who is well-dressed, with a good appearance, especially in large cities, in New York, it is almost impossible for the young man to get a start who are willing to overcome the handicap of an unfavorable impression. It seems as though New Yorkers would forgive anything quicker than a slovenly or a shabby attire in appearance. —Success Magazine.

STREETS IN A BIG STORE.

The Elder of Merchandise Is Now Being Sold in Kansas.

In a large wholesale grocery store in Kansas City the lanes that intersect the great piles of merchandise have been named as streets, and the stacks of boxes, bags and packages have each been marked with a number, so the houses upon city streets are numbered. The other day a member of the firm gave the following orders to a stranger: "Go over to Elm street, get that bunch of apples and take them to garage."

A stranger in the big store would not have known what that order meant. The stranger knew.

All canned goods that swell from the formation of gases inside are called "swells" in the grocery trade. In this house all "swells" are kept in a room upstairs called "parlor, S." "Easy street" is a lane that leads down to "Fairland," the big room where many girls work putting up packages.

"Glad to help," is the word which passes through the great stacks of condensed milk. "Cornmeal" goes through this cornmeal packages and barrels.

The system of naming the streets and dividing the different brands of goods into numbers facilitates the business of order filling to the extent that almost twice the work can be done now by the same number of order fillers that could be done a few years ago. —Kansas City Star.

The Free Lance's Problem.

The literary free lance is a free bird, but in New York and thrives in its atmosphere because the market for his wares is stable and infinitely varied. The very life of metropolitan publishing lies in the search for new men and new ideas. Publishers spend great sums upon the winnowing machinery that thrashes over what comes to their editors' desks, and no editor in the metropolis grudges the time necessary to talk with those who call in person and have ideas good enough to carry through his assistants. Publicly the editorial tribe may lament the many hours spent yearly in this winnowing process. Yet every experienced editor in New York has his own story of the stranger, uncouth, unpromising, unready of speech, who stole in late one afternoon, and seemed to have almost nothing in him, yet who afterward became the prolific scribbler or the great D'Aubert. —J. H. Collins in Atlantic.

What a Jubilee Is.

Some years ago, before Queen Victoria's death and about the time that the queen's jubilee was to be celebrated, the following conversation between two old Scotchwomen was overheard one day on a street corner in London. "Can ye tell me, wumman, what is it they call a jubilee?" "Well, it's this," said her neighbor. "When folk has been married twenty-five years, that's a silver wedding, and when they have been married fifty years that's a golden wedding, but if the mon's dead then it's a jubilee." —Harper's Weekly.

Arnold and His Circus.

Matthew Arnold used to travel in company with Mrs. Arnold, his two daughters and the agent, whom he elegantly called his "impresario." They usually had railway passes given to them, and on several occasions, when passing through the office of the conductor, he remarked to the conductor, "Oh, the Arnold troop, I suppose." "Just as if we were a traveling circus," said Mr. Arnold, with a heavy laugh.

The Best Return.

After all, it isn't the way we live or the work we do that matters, but the ideal we put into it. Is there any work too menial, too prosaic, to yield a return of beauty? —Ellen Glasgow.

Nothing to Steal.

Minister's Wife—Wake up! There are burglars in the house, John. Minister—Well, what of it? Let them find out their mistake themselves. —Christian Register.

Don't speak too plainly.

If a man were to set out by calling everything by its right name, he would be knocked down before he got to the corner of the street. —Exchange.

Passed Examination Successfully.

James Donahue, New Britain, Conn., writes: "I tried several kidney remedies, and was treated by our best physicians for diabetes, but did not improve until I took Foley's Kidney Cure. After the second bottle I showed improvement, and five bottles cured me completely. I have since passed a rigid examination for life insurance." Foley's Kidney Cure cures backache and all forms of kidney and bladder trouble. Sturm & Wilson.
